Malenkov Hospitality Astounds

Compiled from AP Dispatches

MOSCOW—An amazed British Labor Party delegation stood goggle-eyed as Soviet Premier Malenkov took Dr. Edith Summerskill out into the garden and personally picked her a bouquet of fox and gladiolus during an unprecedented party here Tuesday night.

Malenkov threw the party for over the dinner table with both the delegation which is headed by former prime minister Clement Attlee and left-wing Labor leader, Aneurin Bevan, at the British Embassy today.

Malenkov's visit to dine today with British Ambassador Sir William Thaxter and all members of the delegation will mark the first time the Soviet premier has had dinner in a Western embassy.

So many toasts were exchanged that Labor party secretary Morgan Phillips told reporters, "I can't remember what was said."

Dr. Summerskill, a cabinet minister in the last Labor government, agreed there were 17 or 18 toasts in vodka but some of them were triple."

The British press in Moscow appeared indignant because the delegation declined to follow the usual Moscow custom of telling the press what was said in the toasts.

Malenkov gave the party just two hours after the delegation arrived in Moscow in a Soviet military plane on its way to a from the cultural organization, a three-week visit to China.

Among those present were Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, Nikita Krushchev, secretary general of the Communist party, Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, Trade Minister Anastase Mikoyan, Nikolai Schvernik, chairman of the All Union Council of Trade Unions, two women

Mendes-France Wins Approval

PARIS (Reuters)—Premier Pierre Mendes-France scored two new political successes Tuesday by winning approval from the French National Assembly for his economic reform and Tunisian programs.

The energetic premier took the assembly floor Tuesday night to defend his policies for North Africa only a few hours after he had won an overwhelming endorsement for his drastic revolting murders.

He declared in his second major speech of the day that the time for out-of-date colonialism was over.

MUST HAVE COURAGE

He said that France must have the courage not to use the recent outbreak of violence and terrorism in Morocco where his government would not hesitate to take any measures, no matter how harsh, that were necessary to put an end to "atrocious killings and endorsement for his drastic revolting murders."

He declared in his second major speech of the day that the time for out-of-date colonialism was over.

And Didn't Yell Fore?

TORONTO (CP)—Two 20-mm. cannon shells were fired from a grounded Vampire jet plane into the Downsview golf course Monday, narrowly missing a Toronto couple.

Mr. and Mrs. George Dulmage said they were standing on the 10th tee when the shells plowed into the ground near them.

RCAF officials said the plane was at the neighboring air base and was having ammunition loaded when a short circuit apparently caused the guns to fire a short burst. The pilot was not in the plane.

Plans Begun For Swim Next Year Training, Tactics To Be Improved

BY BRUCE LOWTHER

Planning has already begun for Florence Chadwick's try next year at "the toughest long distance swim in the world"—the grind from Victoria to Port Angeles.

The Chadwick team, led by navigator Frank Seehorn, began preliminary work yesterday immediately after Miss Chadwick gave in to the urging of her family, her advisers and swim officials to drop plans for a new attempt at 3 p.m. Thursday.

Indications are that Miss Chadwick, who gave up swimming day after taking five hours to complete a quarter of the 18.3-mile journey, will try again around September 1 next year.

She said she may arrive in Victoria in April instead of July 1, and plans training sessions of 10 to 14 hours, rather than the maximum of six hours this year. She will also try to simulate swim conditions during the long practice.

Mr. Seehorn and Dick Chadwick, her brother, who arrived here within the last week, indicated they would spend much more time here next year and use their knowledge of tides and water temperatures.

It was learned some swim two hours before an ebb tide officials during final planning and meetings last week end, to coincide with any swim Monday, when a swimmer would then push her way away from Race Rocks, and the next flood would take her in to Port Angeles.

The group left by boat Monday afternoon reaching the Strait of Juan de Fuca at 10:30 p.m. and the water very rough.

There had been suggestions that the swim start at 11 a.m. Monday, but one local mariner said the wind would have blown him out of the strait.

Mr. Seehorn planned the early start so the afternoon winds would "push her down hill" to Port Angeles but he didn't pay enough attention to the tides.

Fred Manning, co-sponsor of the swim, called Monday's attempt "the best experience possible" and pointed out the team was "flying completely blind."

But he emphasized that Mr. Seehorn had the best job possible considering the unavoidable circumstances prevented his arrival before last week.

Mr. Manning said the vain attempt Monday may have cost everyone "as much as $100,000," then added, "we can do a first-class, hang-up job next year for far less money."

No tickers were accepted after the swim was started.

Miss Chadwick planned the swim to the English Channel as the greatest challenge to distance swimmers, with Miss Chadwick stating "Swimmers from all over the world will come here."

Miss Chadwick, who leaves Victoria tonight for TV appearances in the U.S., disclosed she lost four pounds during the five-hour swim.

The swim committee of the Victoria Kinsmen Club, which conducted a time-guessing contest involving the swim, said entries have been sealed and will be opened at the Salmon Fall Fair at the Victoria Agricultural Hall September 4 to 6.

No tickers were accepted after the swim was started.

Union Chiefs Keep Silent

Vote in Favor of Rail Strike Predicted for Meeting Today

Montreal (CP)—All unofficial sources say a vote for a strike will be announced when the union chiefs of 145,000 non-operating railway employees meet here today.

The predictions of those on the outskirts of the contract dispute which involves "fringe" demands by the employees were in marked contrast to the principal officers in the negotiations, who declined any comment whatever.

But well-informed sources said the reticence of the officers merely stemmed from the traditional reluctance of railroaders to indulge in more rough-and-tumble contract methods of such industries as mining and shipping.

"Any statements about the stage,"

Horse Angered

MONTREAL (CP)—Little is known about the horse that was injured in the race.

Frank Hall, chairman of a 14-member negotiating committee, said the horse, Joan Craig, 2 1/2, ended up in hospital Tuesday because she was "angry" and wanted to share her Randy with the other horses.

Instead, he bared his teeth, took a hefty bite from her shoulder and swung her high in the air.

It took four men and several minutes' work to get him to release his hold.

Joan was taken to hospital suffering severe bite wounds and shock.

Fanatical Swedes Hike 300 Miles on Nothing

STOCKHOLM (AP)—Ten haggard, die-hard nutrition fanatics Tuesday night completed a 10-day, 300-mile march across Sweden without any nutrition at all.

The group walked from Gothenburg on Sweden's west coast, to its capital on the Baltic, making 30 miles a day on nothing but water. Each lost up to 20 pounds.

Despite their privations the men walked amazingly well, smiling happily and waving in reply to the applause they received while passing through the streets of the capital. The crowds hung wreaths of flowers around their necks and women rushed to kiss and embrace them.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

WHEN they threw a party for a big B.C. executive who was retiring the other day, the people expected the man proposing the toast to say the usual flattering things.

But they wondered how he was going to do it. The boss had been a rough old varmint with a temper like a wounded bear. He got results, but he left a trail of injured feelings. It took only a trifling error to send him into a tare of red-hot language.

Now the boss was about to retire. The people assembled stiffly around him, with glasses in their hands, didn't envy the man who had to propose the toast.

That man, surprisingly calm, lifted his hands for silence.

"I was supposed to say some nice things about Mr. Blank," he said, "but I couldn't think of any. So I got in touch with the district office and asked them what I ought to say. They didn't know. Then I wrote to head office, and they told me what to say."

Whatever the head office told him to say, he didn't follow instructions very closely.

He stood there with a smile frozen on his face and a nasty cold look around the eyes, and called the retiring executive every name he could think of. He said the boss was selfish, ill-tempered, inconsiderate of other. He ran through a catalogue of the man's faults, sparing no detail.

He did it in such a fashion as to leave himself an escape route. If someone had challenged him, he could have said he was only kidding. But he also made it clear that he meant what he said.

Time came for the testy old man to answer. For a moment his face quivered. Then it slipped back to its usual leathery composure. His voice faltered just a little. Then he gruffly acknowledged that he had got mad too easily, at times.

That brief acknowledgement (the nearest the boss ever got to an apology in his life) and that faint twitch, meant the white flag. The boss was saying, as well as he could, that he was sorry for being a tyrant all these years.

It was hard for him to make this admission, even in such a sketchy way. The men who stood in silence around were witnessing the old fellow's defeat.

Some of them watched with relish. This was the kind of moment they had hoped for. Others had a different emotion. This was like seeing an old ragged lion caught in a snare.

Then clapping broke out. Men pressed in and shook the old fellow's hand, and said they were sorry to see him go. Oddly enough, they meant it. That flicker of weakness had lighted up the man behind the mask.

Some of the workers for that firm are relentless in their dislike. From what I hear, however, others look upon him with a new respect. They may visit the old man in retirement. If so, they will probably find him in good company. They are not afraid of him. He isn't their boss any more.

Pour Out Average of $86

Big Canadian Spenders Make U.S. Tourists Seem Tightwads

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian Americans, who spent $282,000 in the United States last year, have become such big spenders that Americans traveling to Canada look like tightwads by comparison.

While the number of visits by Canadians in the United States reached the record of 23,300,000 last year, they were still short about 5,000,000 the number of visits by Americans to this country.

But Canadians outspent their American counterparts by $25,000,000 in travel expenditure.

The bureau of statistics said Tuesday in its report on travel for 1953 that Canadians visiting the U.S. longer than 48 hours spent an average of $86, compared with $52 by the average American in Canada for a similar period.

On a population basis, Canada's travel expenditures of $307,000,000 in the U.S. averaged $20.79 per person, far higher than the average of $1.77 for this similar period.

Elsewhere in the travel picture, Canadians spent $58,000,000 in overseas travel, compared with $47,000,000 in 1952. More

Rescue Teams Fail

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Two rescue parties failed Tuesday to recover the body of an 18-year-old Winnipeg boy who fell 900 feet Sunday during a descent from the 9,675-foot peak of treacherous Mount Rundle.

The two parties, which stayed on the mountainside overnight, were said to be lacking proper equipment to "lower" Jack Nelson's body down from the tree-line. A third party was to leave Banff early today with more rope and other supplies.

The group was reported unable to get the body over, and down a steep ledge. Beyond that, there is yet another ledge to overcome.

TUMBLED 900 FEET

Nelson, University of Manitoba engineering student working as a shoeshine boy in a hotel here for the summer, decided to leap over a small cliff Sunday when coming down from the peak with companion Barry Nixon of Regina.

He landed in loose shale and tumbled 900 feet down a steep incline. He was dead when Nixon reached him.

Both boys were inexperienced mountaineers.

Channel 11 At Full Power

Tacoma's KTNT-TV officially begins high-power operation this morning.

The Channel 11 station increased its output from 58,000 watts to 316,000 watts during the week end.

Although the popular CBS outlet has been intermittently testing on high power, during the past two days, full-time operation was not possible because of technical difficulties.

Viewers will be advised of the station's changes when programs commence about 10 a.m. today, according to Robert Lyte, production manager of the Tacoma station.

Victor TV fans reported varied reception from KTNT-TV during the tests Monday and Tuesday.

The Husband Who Wasn't There

BY WILLIAM G. BOGART

(Copyright, 1954, William G. Bogart. Illustration, Copyright, 1954, King Features Syndicate, Inc. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.)

I was drifting along the highway back to town when I realized, after a while, that a car had been following me. It trailed me into town.

I drove to the hotel, parked, went directly upstairs. But before I walked down the long hall to my room I stepped to a wide, curtained window at the front of the hall and peered out. The car that had been following me, a heavy dark sedan, was parked almost across the street close to a fire hydrant. I couldn't make out who was at the wheel. I went downstairs again and crossed the street to the parked car.

It was the two lugs who worked for Valenti. The ex-pug, George, was at the wheel. The sandy-haired one with the blue-white eyes sat beside him. I put my hands on the open window and beat forward to look at them.

George said, "Well, if it isn't Mac, Small world!"

"I'm sorry to have to disappoint you gentlemen," I said.

George's dull eyes looked puzzled. "Come again Mac?"

"I haven't found him yet. I'll let you know as soon as I do."

Neither man spoke. Each gave me an unblinking stare.

I grimmed and went back to the hotel. When I got upstairs and peered out the window again, the car was gone.

In the room I found a yellow telephone slip pushed beneath the door. The writing on the slip said: "Please call Midland 8-717." The time stamp on the message showed that the call had been received only five minutes ago.

It was a local exchange and I gave the switchboard girl the number.

"You called me," I said.

"Stephen Morgan?"

"Right."

"This is Elsie Patterson."

I frowned. Her voice didn't sound exactly as it had back there on the dock.

"Yes?" I said.

"I've only a moment. Sheldon will be right back," Her husband will be right back."

Garden Notes

Blind Garden Huge Success

M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

One of the most unusual gardens which has ever come to my notice has just been constructed by the City of Birmingham, England, in one of its city parks. It is a garden for the blind.

While not completely thornless, there are among the less heavily armed varieties.

In another part of the garden, there is a raised border lined up with scented plants.

These beds stand about three feet above the footpath level, behind stone retaining walls, so even the aged and infirm may lean over and sniff without undue effort. On the coping of the wall, the name of each plant is given in Braille, embossed on a metal plate.

OLD FAVORITES

As may be expected, many of the plants are fragrant herbs such as thyme, sage, pennyroyal, mint, tansy and angelica. However, there are lots of the old garden favorites there, too, including mimosa, sweet alder, lavender, lily of the valley, hyacinths, pinks, and the spicy, clove-scented stocks.

Dotted throughout the garden are shrubs selected for the scent of either their flowers or foliage, such as rosemary, wintersweet, and the lemon-scented verbena.

GRASSLESS LAWN

Even the lawn has been grown especially for the blind, for there isn't a blade of grass in it — it is made entirely of the fragrant camomile!

In the short time since it was opened, the Birmingham garden for the blind has been an unqualified success, for not only do the blind workers at the Institute visit the garden regularly and often during their lunch hour, but coach excursions have been organized from the blind institutions of neighboring towns, and the Birmingham School for the Blind is using the garden in its syllabus of training for the newly blinded.

PRIVATE FORUM

Goldberg, Mardones and 26 other top specialists from Europe, North America and Latin America met for a private international forum on alcoholism sponsored by the Alcoholism Research Foundation to prepare a report for the fifth International Congress of Mental Health which assembles here next week.

Dr. Goldberg admitted Sweden's 10-year-old rationing system had flaws as well as merits. For example, he said, 70 per cent of the adult male population had ration books, but 90 per cent drank. Only 30 per cent of those classed as alcoholics used their ration books at all.

STAFF AT 14

Dr. Mardones said Chile's big alcohol problems were its 20-year-old alcoholics who started drinking at 14 and the high percentage of job absenteism.

So many Chileans missed work with a Monday hangover that the government closed all wine stores on Saturdays and Sundays. Later it passed a law forcing employers to pay an extra day's wages to all workers who made it in every day of the week.

"The idea is working very successfully," he said.

Jobless Causing Trouble

DELHI, Ont. (BUP) — Some 3,000 broke and hungry tobacco workers roamed the streets without jobs Tuesday as the district's annual tobacco harvest opened.

About 6,000 others entered the fields to start trimming the tobacco, but farmers refused to hire the rest, most of whom were inexperienced at the work.

Police were called from Tillsonburg and Simcoo to keep order among the angry jobless.

FAKE AGENTS

Some of them paid as much as $20 to fake "job agents" who sent them to town in taxis, and on their arrival found no jobs, no place to stay and no municipal relief.

I told Bill what I wanted. "If there's any way possible, I'd like to hear before tonight," I said. "I know that's asking a lot, kid."

"Anybody can do it by phone," he said. "I'll try."

I gave him my room number and the hotel name. There was little to do now but wait. I had a sandwich and beer sent up to the room, ordered some newspapers, sent the linen suit down to the valet shop for a press, then stretched out on the bed with the papers. At six that evening the urgent ringing of the telephone woke me up.

It was Hendricks calling from Chicago. "I got what I could," he said.

"I'm not fussy," I told him.

"I've only a moment. Sheldon will be right back," Her husband will be right back."

B.E.G. Officials Answer Criticism of Marathon

VANCOUVER (BUP) — The Empire Games committee broke silence yesterday to defend itself against continuing criticism of the way Jim Peters was allowed to stagger on in the marathon after collapsing 12 times on the Empire Stadium track.

A top official disclosed that at least one Vancouver doctor pleaded with track officials to take the exhausted Englishman out of the grueling 26-mile race, lest he endanger his life. He said English team officials refused the doctor's request.

The doctor was identified as Dr. Craig Arnold, a young intern, who with Dr. Robert Johnson was on the sidelines when Peters reeled into the stadium.

UNFAMILIAR WORK

Dr. Stuart Maddin, who was in charge of medical personnel at the stadium, said yesterday that the Vancouver doctors had never attended a track meet in a professional capacity before and were unfamiliar with athletic procedure. Dr. Maddin said they were informed that Peters couldn't be taken out of the race without permission of the English team manager.

Despite Dr. Arnold's pleas, British officials urged their man on to victory and teammates screamed encouragement from the sidelines.

Peters was still suffering from exhaustion at Shaughnessy Hospital yesterday, but was reported improved. Hospital officials said he might be released from hospital in a day or two.

NOT YET RECOVERED

Leslie Truelove, English team manager, said, "Peters is resting comfortably. He is not fully recovered from exhaustion. He is now under observation of the doctors."

Asked if there was any known permanent damage, Truelove said, "Doctors can't know immediately but they are keeping him under observation. We sincerely hope there is none."

The first intimation of permanent damage to Peters' either."

Saanich Stuck with It

Reeve Airs Wrangle On Welfare Payment

Faced with the prospect of litigation over welfare payments amounting to approximately $700 made by Saanich and allegedly the responsibility of Central Saanich, Reeve Sydney Pickles of Central Saanich read into the records of his municipality last night a statement of his and his council's stand.

"It has been reported in the press that Saanich proposes to take legal action to recover $700 which they paid in error to a resident of Central Saanich municipality. The statement goes on to say that the mistake was later discovered," said the Reeve.

"This is not correct as Saanich had full and complete knowledge of the situation before they made these payments."

Central Saanich made payments for this welfare case for the months of January and February, 1951 and after that, so far as Central Saanich was aware, they came to an end. But it has now been established that the Municipality of Burnaby, in spite of being advised to send the account to Central Saanich, sent it to Saanich and Saanich made the unwise mistake of paying the account instead of forwarding it to us for payment.

"To keep the record straight, it should be stated that Central Saanich has always met all its legal obligations as a governmental body handling public money. It has no legal permission to use such money to pay so-called moral obligations or to repay payments made on their account without the knowledge, consent or request of Central Saanich."

"Private individuals can do as they please with their private money but this definitely does not apply to elected officials handling public money. I think the Saanich Council is perfectly aware of this situation and, if not, they should be."

Style Critics Called Unfair

TORONTO (CP) — Grumbles some lovely pictures printed of "unfair" were heard in Toronto Tuesday over the London Sunday Pictorial's criticism of Princess Alexandra to get rid of her "old maid" wardrobe, which it brand as "old maid."

Hiram McCallum, Canadian National Exhibition general manager who will be host to a meeting in outfit "that make the 17-year-old princess and her look twice her age."

Her mother, the Duchess of Kent, when they visit the CNE store fashion bureau who saw this month, said the report "most unfair."

"We'll be happy to see she 'looked very nice, rather princess in anything she conservatively dressed but in wears," he said. "I think she good taste and certainly approach swell and there have been privately for the occasion."

Award Due On Contract For Sewers

A special meeting of Esquimalt council will be held at 5 p.m. today to award the contract for the first local improvement sewer project in the municipality.

The council's public works committee drew up a recommendation on the contract, which involves the Forsyth-Shirley area, after a meeting with John Graeme, municipal engineer, last night.

Low bid was submitted by G. W. Ledington, Vancouver, who set a figure of $36,089, compared with the original council estimate of about $42,000.

The truth came out when Dr. Kenneth Young, director of medical services at the University of British Columbia, admitted he put four stitches in Landy's foot. Dr. Young said he did the surgery early Friday, but "I didn't check him till Sunday. The stitches had not been removed and Landy said he suffered no pain during the race."

Premier Construction Company, Vancouver, bid $51,586.40, highest of the four tenders.

Blasting Job, Diving End

Blasting operations carried out in Victoria harbor in connection with dredging have ended. Col. Keith Dixon, district marine agent, said yesterday.

He also said diving off the Sutil Point, Cortez Island, is in operation, and the flashing white light on the gas and bell buoy temporarily replacing the Sandies' lightship, at the mouth of the Fraser River, will be changed to flashing green.

"The truth is," Mr. Halton said, "that Doug, who was born and raised in Victoria in the era of the Patriots and the Champs, is in fact or was—one of the best all-round athletes ever produced in Canada, and the Colonist was proud to have him as one of its representatives at the British Empire Games."

Speaking on the opening day of the federation's 33rd convention, Mr. Prior said he feels Canadian provinces have attempted to avoid some of the weaknesses of education patterns in many other countries.

He added: "We still have the problem of providing fully for the individual—of giving him the type of education from which he can receive the most benefit."

"Most provinces are attempting to deal with this problem—a problem not too well understood by those responsible for financing education."

The whale is the largest animal, reaching a length of more than 100 feet and a weight of more than 200 tons.

"In the normal course and had we been advised of these payments at the time, they would have been paid by the Central Saanich municipality. Central Saanich received no advice or notification that these payments were being made and they therefore had no knowledge of them."

"To keep the record straight, it should be stated that Central Saanich has always met all its legal obligations as a governmental body handling public money. It has no legal permission to use such money to pay so-called moral obligations or to repay payments made on their account without the knowledge, consent or request of Central Saanich."

"Private individuals can do as they please with their private money but this definitely does not apply to elected officials handling public money. I think the Saanich Council is perfectly aware of this situation and, if not, they should be."

St. Lawrence Project

INITIATION of work on the power section of the great St. Lawrence Seaway yesterday at Cornwall and Massena gave politicians on both sides of the border an opportunity to speak of bonds, symbols, co-operation and the intangibles of the human spirit. They did it well, and there is no need to retrace that ground. Back of the formalities, however, Canadians and Americans alike yesterday put their feet on the beginning of a big journey together, and one with a practical, useful and entirely realizable objective. It will be the engineers who will take over now and stage by stage bring the project into being as a lasting benefit all round.

The immediate stage of the power project involves construction of a half-mile dam from Barnhart Island to the American shore near Massena; two powerhouses in the section between the island and the Canadian shore; and two lesser dams upstream from the site. Long Sault Island will pass out of existence. The river will rise some 80 feet on its banks above the dams, and International Rapids will become a placid, broad lake. From the impounded water, however, an imposing energy will be tapped for hydroelectric power. The official estimate is some twelve billion kilowatt hours of electricity yearly, which will be shared between Canadian and American areas on both sides of the border. This may take five years to complete, and is only the first stage of the seaway project itself.

Immediately useful as will be the electrical energy when it is made available, it is the seaway itself which has captured Canadian attention. If stage by stage as the giant undertaking proves feasible the St. Lawrence Seaway is pushed ahead to completion, the Twentieth Century will have added something definite and tangible to one of the great waterways of the world. Deep water navigation has built civilizations by rendering possible an easy interchange of trade. The seaway, while it will not be navigable to ocean vessels for all of its length, will bring the influence of the Atlantic deep into the heart of Canada at its common border with the United States.

Thirty years ago the seaway could have been begun had there been a meeting of minds across the international border. Today happily there has been, in so far at least as the power element in the case is concerned. The rest, one does not doubt, will follow. So in the end the politicians may be right, if by "bond" they mean a mutual promise to leave behind a work which will be of enduring benefit to generations of men and women yet unborn. For the St. Lawrence Seaway is a realizable vision, a bright goal to be won.

A Day with the Navy

ANOTHER Navy Day has rolled around, and the Pacific Command is eager and waiting to play host to Greater Victorians and visitors today in every branch of its establishment. The keynote of the occasion is summed up by Rear-Admiral J. C. Hubbard, flag officer, when he says: "The purpose of Navy Day is to provide another opportunity for the people of this community to know their Navy and to see at first hand the high calibre of personnel required and the exacting training necessary to ensure the efficient operation and maintenance of Canada's modern fighting ships." For their part Victorians will be no less eager to accept the Navy's invitation to be its guests.

There is more to see than ever before. As it grows steadily in strength so does the RCN expand its liaison with its civilian kin. The recent visit of the Duke of Edinburgh was an example of the efforts made by naval authorities to put facilities at the disposal of the community.

The readiness with which the Navy Band, an excellent group of performers, assists in the promotion of local events is another instance of co-operation. There is a happy link here between the men at Esquimalt and the people they represent.

A large and interesting program has been prepared for today. Visitors will be allowed into almost every nook and cranny of both the Dockyard and Naden. They may go aboard any one of nine ships, including two visiting USN destroyer-escorts. They can watch at close quarters various training and ceremonial demonstrations, or if they prefer inspect technical and maintenance departments that help to keep the ships afloat. There will be an imposing sail past of six warships off Beacon Hill Park. Special arrangements are being set up for the public to enjoy everything with the greatest ease and comfort. All in all the Navy is sparing no pains to make this a day to remember, and its invitation is one to be accepted with alacrity.

Let's Quit Apologizing

MR. Blair Fraser's truism—"You can get Canadians to talk a lot about a Canadian book but you cannot get them to buy it"—puts a finger on the spot. Little as it may be known to the public this nation has a fine, distinctive literature. Considered by itself it is a revealing introduction to Canada from the days of the fur traders, onward through a century of farming in what was once Upper and Lower Canada, and forward to the present time when the "new north" is coming each day more sharply into focus. To this British and French influences have contributed equally, to produce a body of literature for which no one need apologize.

Literally "from sea to sea" Canadian minds have been active over a fairly long period of time. As the Ottawa editor of Maclean's observes, the apologists are the first in evidence and the most numerous. But it is not to them that one must turn for a rational verdict on the sum of Canadian letters at the midpoint of this century. Outside of Canada the work of Canadian authors has long been appreciated for itself and for its fundamental difference from the literature of any other western land.

Yet Mr. Fraser is right in his estimate. Until Canadians stop apologizing for what they have and what they are the rest of the world cannot be expected to force its distinctly more generous estimate of Canadians upon us. Deeper, until Canadians know what has been written in Canada and have compared it with the comparable works of other nations they will not be able to form a sound valuation of the home output. It is high time to stop apologizing for Canadian authors and to turn instead to reading them. That would be all the incentive they need to develop confidence in themselves.

Interpreting the News

France To Try Experiment

BY J. M. ROBERTS, JR.
Associated Press News Analyst

FRANCE is about to undertake an experiment which will go a long way toward determining whether American economic aid can be withdrawn without definitely weakening her as an ally.

The French economic system is a hodge-podge of feudalism, capitalism and socialism which would require a five-foot shelf to explain to the average North American. Any attempt to generalize about it is bound to result in over-simplification and error.

There are, however, a few things which stand out.

Private capital and government capital in French industry are about equally divided. Much of the private capital represents family ownership, frequently in industries which are definitely backward, wedded to expensive and archaic methods, restriction production to maintain prices.

"Risk" capital—investment by banks and through an open financial market—plays a very small role in France.

Competition has been greatly restricted through all sorts of cartel agreements, large and small. French industry has grown since the war, but the growth has been very largely based on American aid.

The government has now decided that this static tendency must be overcome by increasing competition, eliminating archaic and high-cost operations, lowering French and European trade barriers to create new markets and expanding both industry and agriculture.

On the surface, the program appears to be a shot in the arm for capitalism. However, there will be so much government involved that parallels between standard capitalist and socialist systems will be hard to draw.

At any rate, in France it marks an effort to do something. If it succeeds, it will provide an argument for those who contend that American foreign aid should be restricted in favor of producing the urge for self-help.

"If you wish to come to a garden party, then you go straight home and get dressed to come to a garden party."

Thinking Aloud

of shoes—and ships—and seas
—wax—of cabbages and kings'

By TOM TAYLOR

I HAVE a book on my shelves I read every so often. It is "Mr. Standfast," and it gives me a lift each time I renew acquaintance with Peter Pienaar.

Peter was a Boer hunter who got mixed up in secret service business with Richard Hanney. As a reward, although grey-haired and well over the age limit, he was appointed to the executive council and given administrative responsibility for some of the government departments. There could be no question of surrendering British sovereignty in Cyprus by yielding to the agitation among Greek-speaking Cypriots for Enosis, or union with Greece.

But he had fortitude, and his stubbornness quickens the pulse. There came a day when he crawled back into a cockpit and went up to prevent a German ace from getting back to his lines with vital information. Peter made sure by diving his own plane into the German's, both pilots crashing to their deaths.

Peter Pienaar is fictional; Douglas Bader is real, and he lost both legs. Yet they were poured from the same crystal mould.

Were Bader the creation of a novelist, he would seem impossible. Never was truth stranger than fiction than in the case of this indomitable Englishman who refused to be beaten.

When that day in 1941 he failed to return from a sortie over France his squadron was incredulous. All in all the Navy is sparing no pains to make this a day to remember, and its invitation is one to be accepted with alacrity.

And no wonder. Even by then he was a legend; the man who lost both legs in an air crash, forced himself to dance on aluminum supports (so that he might take his girl out), mastered tennis and golf, and then went on to become one of the Battle of Britain's most brilliant fighter pilots, was no ordinary mortal.

It is humbling to contemplate such greatness of spirit.

The Bader story, "Reach for the Sky," is to be made into a film, and curiously enough by another disabled veteran who conquered his handicap.

Major Daniel Angel came back to Britain from Burma on a stretcher, a polo victim. He was told he would never walk again. Unlike Bader, who fought his misfortune from the first bleak moment, Angel gave up; and small blame to him at that.

Then one day, lying alone and helpless in a friend's home, he heard the telephone ring. By some miracle he half-rawled, half-staggered across the floor—and answered it. Then, realizing what he had done, he looked down at himself in amazement. He had walked!

He kept on walking. He fought his way to partial health. He bought a camera and eventually became a movie producer. And now he will depict the Bader life story.

If kinship of disability is a criterion it should be a fine film. And if faithfully portrayed it should be an inspiration to all who see it.

The actor who will depict Bader in the film is the British star, Richard Burton. When I read this, I wondered why Angel doesn't cast Bader to play himself.

Movie producers don't do this sort of thing, although in this case why not? Bader wouldn't need to act; he would simply re-live days that must be etched deeply in his mind forever. He is young, too, and seemingly handsome as well. As far as that goes, he'd probably turn out to be a first-rate movie actor.

The man who conquered fate as Bader did wouldn't be fazed by a movie camera.

At all events this is one film worth looking forward to; the story of the cripple who reached for the sky and made it his own.

International Commentary...

The Cyprus Situation

By KENNETH BRADLEY Director of the Imperial Institute, London

M.R. HOPKINSON, Minister of State, announced the other day that Her Majesty's government proposed to give Cyprus a new constitution which would set the island on the road to full internal self-government within the Commonwealth. It would provide for a legislative council with a majority of official and nominated members and a minority of elected members. Some of the latter would, he said, also be appointed to the executive council and given administrative responsibility for some of the government departments. There could be no question of surrendering British sovereignty in Cyprus by yielding to the agitation among Greek-speaking Cypriots for Enosis, or union with Greece.

This is not the first time that Britain has offered Cyprus a more democratic constitution. Indeed, an offer made and rejected in 1948 has remained open until now. This time, however, steps are to be taken to introduce the constitution without asking the Enosis whether they want it or not.

Cyprus has never, of course, belonged to Greece. Nor has it been independent for at least 2,000 years. Nobody, least of all the Cypriots, denies that since the land was ceded to Britain by Turkey in 1923, it has had better government, a higher standard of living, and particularly since the war, more rapid economic and social progress than in all her long recorded history. Local government, in which Cypriots play a leading part, has developed rapidly; malaria has been eradicated; soil conservation, afforestation and water supplies have been developed, and education has reached a high standard. The island's 10-year development program is costing £15 million, some of which, with more to come, is being paid by the British taxpayer from colonial departmental and welfare funds. All this is greatly appreciated by the Cypriots, and they all know that if poverty-stricken Greece had been in control, little or none of it would have happened.

But say the Enosis, all this weighs nothing in the scales against the call of the blood; they would rather starve in a Greek garret than live in British luxury. They have been saying this for years, and recently the previously reluctant Greek government has espoused this cause. Greece in fact proposes to raise the matter at the next meeting of the United Nations.

It is difficult for anyone to judge the extent and depth of the Enosis movement in Cyprus. It has always been led and fostered by the archbishop and his clergy, and for reasons entirely unconnected with love of Greece in the feelings of the people, by the local Communists. The church is powerful in Cyprus and there are quite a lot of Communists. But not all Cypriots are Greek-speaking. Of the 510,000 people in the island 90,000 are Turkish-speaking. They, of course, are bitterly opposed to union with Greece, and they too have now elicited the support of Ankara. Turkey and all Turkish-speaking Cypriots support the British connection. Nor, if a secret ballot were taken, is it certain all the Greek-speaking Cypriots would vote for Enosis. Nevertheless, secret ballot or no, Enosis might carry the day. Why then can there be no question of Britain agreeing to it, particularly as the Greeks would undoubtedly be willing to grant her a lease for the military base which she really needs?

The answer of the British government is that a base leased from a foreign power, particularly in the eastern Mediterranean, does not give enough security. Cyprus lies on the route from the Black Sea to the "soft-under-belly of Europe." In the event of war Greece might well be occupied by the enemy, as she was last time, and in Cyprus, with its Communist element, a very dangerous internal situation might develop. Furthermore the base is not a purely

The Pack-sack

OF GREGORY CLARK

WHAT happens to all the glass jars in which modern food is presented in the stores? Tin cans are easy. You can just chuck 'em in the garbage can; or, if you are the thoughtful type, you take them out back and step on them, crushing them flat so they won't take up so much room in the great waste-heap of humanity.

Only a few years ago, glass jars were so highly prized by the thrifty housewife that she would buy certain groceries with an eye in gaining a sly profit on the deal by obtaining the glass jar to add to her collection. Down cellar or in the pantry she would have baskets and cartons full of assorted jars ready for the summer's jelly making or the autumn's pickling. In many a kitchen, the drinking glass by the sink would be the glass peanut butter came in.

Those were the days when not so many things came in glass. Nowadays prepared coffee powder, soap, oysters, chicken meat, besides pickles, cleaners, paints, have joined the procession of pickles, olives, jellies, and peanut butter to create a glut in the domestic bottle backlog.

At the same time, there may not be so many thrifty housewives as there were a while ago. Or could it be that modern housekeeping in these functional little bungalows that are accommodating so many of the new generation have no room for the accumulations of derrit, litter, junk, odds and ends which in more spacious times, were part of the art of house-keeping? If, in the next week or two, we were to go for a walk in the afternoon through one of these new housing subdivisions, would we smell that beautiful odor of pickles being cooked, ketchup, preserves—a smell that used to be an characteristic of the city streets, in late August and early September, as the smell of burning leaves was in late October.

Alas, the new housing subdivisions have no leaves to burn, because they have no trees; and the young wives have no pickles to cook because they have no place to collect old bottles and jars. As tenderly as we'd once recollect the odors of autumn, today's young ones, when they grow nostalgic in 50 years, will recall being pushed around the supermarket in wire baskets on wheels.

Boorish Manners

(From Toronto Globe and Mail)

THE unseemly discussion of the cost of bringing the Duchess of Kent and her daughter, the Princess Alexandra, to Canada to open the Canadian National Exhibition and, later, the Sir Adam Beck Generating Station, is a deplorable display of bad manners. No properly-bred person invites a guest to visit and then discusses with all the neighborhood the high cost of entertaining him, even to boast about it. The Duchess did not ask to come; she was invited. It was an honor to the exhibition and to the hydro that she accepted the invitation. In view of the compari-nons made with the cost of entertaining other visitors for the same purpose, we believe she would be well within her rights to cancel the commitment.

If we cannot do these things with grace and courtesy, it would be better if we never did them at all. The prospect of interesting royalty in other ceremonial enterprises in this country has undoubtedly been considerably dimmed. The bad taste of some people in this city is on exhibition daily. It is unfortunate that their bad manners have been revealed as clearly.

Wearing Out Tarzan

(From The Portland Oregonian)

A STRUGGLING young writer named Edgar Rice Burroughs sat down to his typewriter 40 years ago and began hammering out an African parody on the legend of Romulus and Remus. He'd never been there, but he had a copy of Stanley's "In Darkest Africa" and a 50-cent dictionary.

These were adequate aids. It turned out, for his readers, that he had devoured "Tarzan of the Apes" and clammed for more.

When Burroughs died in Tarzana, Calif., four years ago, he had written 22 Tarzan books that had been translated in 56 languages. Fathered two dozen Tarzan movies and earned an estimated $10,000,000.

People will never tire, it appears, of the nobleman's son, orphaned in the jungle and raised by Kala, the great ape. Movie fans still flock to hear Tarzan try out his three word vocabulary (Ugh, Me Tarzan) and see him gambol with his savage pals, Tantor, the elephant; Numa, the lion, and Sheeta, the panther.

Even life in a celluloid jungle is rigorous, however. A fellow gets tired of swinging from vine to vine, day after day, rescuing his lightly-clad mate from fearful dangers; grappling to the death with man-eating crocodiles, etc.

Hollywood has worn out 10 Tarzans since 1917, when Elmo Lincoln first donned the leather loincloth and began beating his chest. Others who got too old or too overstuffed to play the Lord of the Jungle were Gene Polar, F. Dempsey Tabor, James H. Pierce, Frank Merrill, Johnny Weissmuller, Buster Crabbe, Herman Brix, Glenn Morris and Lex Barker.

We are in the upsurge of pride that one of our local boys, Gordon M. "Rattlesnake Pete" Werschul, has been chosen to be Tarzan No. 11. Mr. Werschul has admirable physical qualifications for the role. And after working as a professional lifeguard, fishing drunks out of Las Vegas resort pools, he should find it easy to cope with crocodiles.

Market staged a brilliant recovery and snapped a four-day losing streak with a substantial advance.

Aircrafts and steels were prominent on the rise, and they had help from the entire market.

There was quick profit-taking as the advance extended itself, and that caused some leaders to drop back under their best.

Oils lagged early in the session and then joined the rest in the rise.

Aircrafts and companies affiliated with the industry had a high representation in the list of most active issues.

Among higher Canadian stocks were Dome Mines and McIntyre, both up 5%, and Distillers Seagram up 4%.

Royalite Oil, Canadian issue on the American stock exchange, was down 1/2.

Toronto Follows Suit

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market moved up solidly in a determined recovery after three days of weakness.

Overnight export loadings of Canadian wheat included: United Kingdom 250,000 bushels; Netherlands 375,000; Republic of Ireland 145,000; Belgium 70,000; and the Dominican Republic, a small lot.

Papers, the market's weak spot Monday, closed mixed to a little firmer Tuesday. Utilities were industrial's greatest strength and liquors and manufacturers were also strong.

Steels closed narrowly ahead and constructions, foods, refining oils and financial institutions were steady.

Brokers said they attributed the higher movement to a feeling among investors that prices fell too far in the decline late last week. They noted stocks at New York were well ahead yesterday.

In the western oils gains outnumbered losses more than two to one at the close.

Senior base metals closed steady. Juniors were strong.

Industrials Improve

TORONTO (CP) — Stock market prices moved ahead in moderately active trading.

Banks and carriers held steady. The remainder of the industrial market gained strength.

Mines were narrowly improved. Western oils were quiet and featureless.

Recovery in Oils

VANCOUVER — Western oils made the best showing in a recovery session. Pacific Pete advanced 60 cents to $7, and Canadian Atlantic, Consolidated Mac-Mac, Liberal and Peace River Natural Gas each added about 20 cents. Smaller gains were made by Del Rio, Canadian Oil, Imperial, New Superior, and York Oils.

Granby was the hot spot among mines with a new high of $1.50 ruling at the close. Near 2,500 shares were traded.

B.C. Forest Products was stronger at $7 1/2 among industrials while Powell River was $3.60, after opening higher.

Finishing Touches Put on New Highway Outlet

Paving contractors were busy yesterday putting blacktop on new Trans-Canada Highway outlet from Victoria. By Friday it will be paved to Burnside.

Road. Contractors here are working between Grange and Belgrave Roads. The last section will be completed next year.

Gleaming new Colquitz Bridge on the Trans-Canada Highway outlet from Victoria was opened this week. Traffic is busy on the new section of Island Highway.

Paving of the road to Burnside will be completed by Friday. Ceremonies for opening of highway and bridge will be arranged later.

Around Town

Unification Sidetracked

Victoria police commission has sidelined a request that the city originate plans for amalgamation of Greater Victoria police departments.

Amalgamation would increase costs, said the mayor, and there is no reason to suggest the idea to municipalities. He was supported by Commissioners W. Hamilton and Gordon Carter in a suggestion to receive and file the matter, raised by Victoria District Trades and Labor Council (AFL-TLC), and referred to the commission by city council.

The labor group said it believed amalgamation would increase efficiency and lessen costs of policing.

The mayor said that if municipalities suggested some plan it might be considered by the city.

It's up to an inter-municipal committee, as in past meetings municipalities have been against any such idea, added Commissioner Hamilton.

Damage of a Japanese plum tree behind the Legislative Buildings is believed by police to have been done yesterday with an adze.

Drug Seller Gets 10 Years

A 10-year prison term was imposed yesterday in County Court on Walter Ward, who pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of a drug for the purpose of trafficking.

Judge J. B. Clearihue, passing sentence, said he had sympathy for drug addicts, but none for those selling drugs.

Maximum sentence is 14 years and a whipping under recently amended law. Ward was the first to be tried in Victoria since the maximum punishment was increased.

Ward was committed for trial in Colwood provincial police court after being arrested July 24, in possession of about 100 capsules of heroin.

Ward, who appeared without counsel, told the court yesterday he took the drugs himself and that he sold to other addicts.

Halloween fireworks sale in Victoria this year will be restricted to three days, except by special permit of the city.

Juveniles Arrested for Taking Cars

Five juveniles among police have been remanded until August 18 on charges of taking cars without the owners' consent.

All the youths, ranging in age from 13 to 17 years, were arrested by detectives late Monday and early yesterday morning. A 13-year-old and a 15-year-old were taken to their parents' home after police interrogation.

Five were placed in juvenile detention before their court appearance yesterday. Disposition of a sixth case is pending.

Council Balks Fence Fight

The plan of a Saanich man to "fight fire with fire" has been temporarily delayed by Saanich council.

Louis Holker, 2535 Killarney, has been trying for some time to have the municipality force his next-door neighbor, Dr. C. M. Mair, 2533 Killarney, to remove a fence between their properties.

No action has been taken, so Mr. Holker last night asked permission to build a fence of his own. Council tabled the request.

Redhead Has Green Thumb

It takes a red head as well as a green thumb to grow a sunflower with 10 blooms, thinks ginger-topped Glenn Lavoie, 2258 Allenby. Only thing wrong with this theory, he says, is that all the other sunflowers in his garden have only a single bloom. Experimental Farm officials say the multiple blooms "are most unusual."

Mountie Music Popular

The force that always gets its man didn't have to search for anyone when the RCMP western band played its second and last Victoria concert at the Beacon Hill Park bandshell last night.

An estimated 3,500 persons enjoyed every item, from the RCMP regimental march to "Holiday for Strings."

Cpl. Jack Hamill sang several religious songs as the 40-piece band, under the direction of Sgt. C. C. Bryson, presented selections from every part of its repertoire.

The five-year-old band, on its first B.C. tour, took part in a sunset ceremony Monday and visited Royal Jubilee and Veterans' Hospital during its brief visit.

The tour is being undertaken, RCMP officials said, "to bring to the attention of young men the opportunities for a career" in the organization, and also to let members of the force hear their own band.

The band attended the British Empire Games, and will end its tour August 17 at the Kelowna Regatta.

Last night's concert was recorded for broadcast by radio station CJVI at 8:30 p.m. today.

Water To Go Way of Flow

Central Saanich council has rejected a request to divert a water course on Marindale Road.

B. Wellwood asked authority to redirect the flowing ditch on his property, to eliminate flooding and bring the water supply adjacent to his home.

But T. G. Mitchell, works supervisor, said the water follows its natural course and during Labor Minister Lyle Wicks to North Victoria Kiwanians as "Mr. Wilkes."

Seen in Passing

Bobby Ross looking pleased

"There are quite a number of American insurance companies who do buy our bonds," he said, "but there are others who will not buy bonds of any company that owns public transportation."

The aversion to public transportation companies was due to the fact that few of them were operating on a sound basis, he said.

"The B.C. Electric has always tried not to let the transit division get out of hand," said Mr. Grauer. "Our policy is that transit earnings should cover operating expenses, bond interest and depreciation. Our application for higher fares is based on the fact that last year our transportation division lost $1,250,000, including depreciation."

Mr. Grauer said that unless steps were taken to keep the transit situation in hand, it would be impossible for B.C.'s legislative buildings, its people, its institutions and its culture . . . ## THERE OUGHTA' BE A LAW

Daily Astrology

BY RITA DEL MAR

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 11. Today's Quotation: "We grow neither better nor worse as we get old, but more like ourselves." — May Lamberton Becker.

Wednesday for everyone: Be conscientious in attention to necessities, your work, service, wardrobe and health. Take no chances, fulfill previous commitments rather than attempt new projects.

Look for your birthday and birthsign below:

March 21 to April 19 (Aries) — Make certain that what you attempt is sound, diplomatic and proper. Be tactful with those in positions of authority.

April 20 to May 20 (Taurus) — Future, transit, distant people or events are important. Give them careful thought and consideration.

May 21 to June 20 (Gemini) — Look over accounts, resources and assets; systematic thinking, effect economies.

June 21 to July 22 (Cancer) — Don't let the actions of others, especially higher ups, upset you and maintain harmony in all dealings.

July 23 to August 22 (Leo) — Be conscientious about attending to necessary tasks. Be discreet with diet and health and in transit.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo) — Gain some relaxation or pleasure, but take care of responsibility first. Guard against chance-taking.

September 23 to October 22 (Libra) — Keep things in your home, office or base of operations on an even keel; don't force things.

October 23 to November 21 (Scorpio) — Curb friction, haste, especially in transit and with associates. Adopt a practical and conservative outlook.

November 22 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Make an effort to be calm, poised, relaxed. Shun carelessness, extravagance with money or belongings.

December 22 to January 19 (Capricorn) — Make broadway cautiously; be extra diplomatic in dealings with others. Check the urge to force things, take your time.

January 20 to February 18 (Aquarius) — What happens beneath the surface of things is important. Keep clear of entanglements; poor judgment.

February 19 to March 20 (Pisces) — There is an accent on friends and associates, financial or credit interests. Step very cautiously.

Planning Ahead — Good for entertainment, sociability, etc.

Strait Gets Full Study

Florence Chadwick To Try Better Training, Tactics

BY BRUCE LOWTHER

Planning has already begun for Florence Chadwick's try next year at "the toughest long distance swim in the world" — the grind from Victoria to Port Angeles.

The Chadwick team, led by navigator Frank Seehorn, began preliminary work yesterday immediately after Miss Chadwick gave in to the urgings of her family, her advisers said.

The fishermen called Monday's course "too direct and swim officials to drop plans for a new attempt at 3 p.m. Thursday.

Indications are that Miss Chadwick, who gave up Monday after taking five hours to complete a quarter of the 183-mile journey, will try again.

All agreed the Strait of Juan de Fuca would replace the English Channel as the greatest challenge to distance swimmers, with Miss Chadwick stating: "Swimmers from all over the world will come here."

Miss Chadwick, who leaves Victoria tonight for TV appearances in the U.S., disclosed she lost four pounds during the five-hour swim.

The swim committee of the Victoria Kinsmen Club, which conducted a time-guessing contest involving the swim, said coupons have been sealed and will be opened at the Saanich Fall Fair at the Saanich agricultural hall, September 4 to 6.

No tickets were accepted after the swim was started.

VERY ROUGH

Weatherman Bill MacKie reported south-southwesterly winds Monday afternoon reached a peak of 26 to 28 miles an hour, which "would have made the water very rough."

There had been suggestions that the swim start at 11 a.m. Monday, but one local mariner said the wind "would have blown her out of the strait."

Mr. Seehorn planned the early start so the afternoon winds would "push her down-hill" to Port Angeles—but he didn't pay enough attention to the tides.

Fred Manning, co-sponsor of the swim, called Monday's attempt "the best experience possible" and pointed out the team was "flying completely blind."

But he emphasized that Mr. Seehorn "did the best job possible considering the unavoidable circumstances prevented his arrival before last week."

Mr. Manning said the vain attempt Monday may have cost everyone "as much as $100,000." Then, added, "we can do a first-class, bang-up job next year for far less money."

Miss Chadwick has stated she wants to try the swim for nothing; but it was indicated a smaller prize might be considered, whether or not she finishes, due to the fact she will publicize the swim as "far worse than the English Channel."

Swimmers officials said, "That should mean much more publicity next year. It will really put Victoria on the map."

ROBOWAT TESTS

Jack Todd, assistant coach, said he and coach Archie McRinn would probably row across to Port Angeles several times in the next six weeks to test tides and water temperatures "the best way" for a swim at the same time next year.

A group of Victoria fishermen, who have navigated local waters for 30 years, yesterday suggested Gonzales Point as the starting place and predicted failure if Horseshoe Bay is used again.

Volunteer drivers were Mrs. E. M. Smith, 50 Lewis; Mrs. H. M. Robson, 460 Kipling; Mrs. G. B. Sterne, Sidney; Mrs. C. L. Hutton, 3927 Saanich; Miss A. and Larry Kennedy, 2811 Colquitt.

The group, led by Alfred Webb and J. H. Veness, also urged Miss Chadwick to leave two hours before an ebb tide and head for Discovery and Trial Islands. An ebb of six to MOSCOW—An amazed British Labor Party delegation stood goggle-eyed as Soviet Premier Malenkov took Dr. Edith Summerskill out into the garden and personally picked her a bouquet of fox and gladioli during an unprecedented party here Tuesday night.

Malenkov threw the party for the dinner table with both Mr. Attlee and Mr. Bevan and agreed to continue the talks at the British Embassy today.

Malenkov's visit to dine today with British Ambassador Sir William Hayter and all members of the delegation will mark the first time the Soviet premier has had dinner in a Western embassy.

SAFE CONCLUSION

Phillips told reporters it would be "a safe conclusion" that Malenkov and Attlee discussed the desirability of closer relations between Britain and the Soviet Union.

Among those present were Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, Nikita Krushchev, secretary general of the Communist party, Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, Trade Minister Anastas Mikoyan, Nikolai Schvernik, chairman of the All Union Council of Trade Unions; two women from the cultural organization, and an interpreter.

TORONTO (CP) — Two 20-mm. cannon shells were fired from a grounded Vampire jet plane into the Downsview golf course Monday, narrowly missing a Toronto couple.

RCAF officials said the plane was at the neighboring air base and was having ammunition loaded when a short circuit apparently caused the guns to fire a short burst. The pilot was not in the plane.

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Ten haggard, die-hard nutrition fanatics Tuesday night completed a 10-day, 300-mile march across Sweden without any nutrition at all.

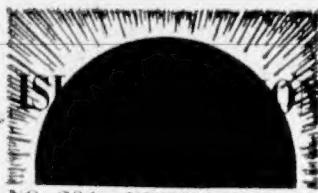

The group walked from Goerborg on Sweden's west coast, to this capital on the Baltic, making 30 miles a day on nothing but water. Each lost up to 20 pounds.

Despite their privations the men walked amazingly well, smiling happily and waving in reply to the applause they received while passing through the streets of the capital. The crowds hung wreaths of flowers around their necks and women rushed to kiss and embrace them.

MOSCOW—An amazed British Labor Party delegation stood goggle-eyed as Soviet Premier Malenkov took Dr. Edith Summerskill out into the garden and personally picked her a bouquet of flox and gladiolus during an unprecedented party here Tuesday night.

Malenkov threw the party for the delegation, which is headed by former prime minister Clement Attlee and left-wing Labor leader, Aneurin Bevan, at the famed old country house "Mozhaisk," where the great writer Maxim Gorky lived and died.

So many toasts were exchanged that Labor party secretary Morgan Phillips told reporters: "I can't remember what was said."

Dr. Summerskill, a cabinet minister in the last Labor government, agreed there were 17 or 18 toasts in vodka but "some of them were triple."

The British press in Moscow appeared indignant because the delegation declined to follow the usual Moscow custom of telling the press what was said in the toasts.

Malenkov gave the party just two hours after the delegation arrived in Moscow in a Soviet military plane on its way to a three-week visit to China.

Among those present were Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, Nikita Krushchev, secretary general of the Communist party, Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, Trade Minister Anastas Mikoyan, Nikolai Schvernik, chairman of the All Union Council of Trade Unions; two women from the cultural organization, and an interpreter.

Mendes-France Wins Approval

PARIS (Reuters)—Premier Pierre Mendes-France scored two new political successes Tuesday by winning approval from the French National Assembly for his economic reform and Tunisian programs.

The energetic premier took the assembly floor Tuesday night to defend his policies for North Africa only a few hours after he had won an overwhelming endorsement for his drastic economic proposals.

He declared in his second major speech of the day that the time for out-of-date colonialism was over.

MUST HAVE COURAGE

He said that France must have the courage not to use the current outbreak of violence and terrorism in Morocco as an excuse for postponing reforms in that protectorate.

At the end of the debate, in which drastic reforms were promised for Morocco, Mendes-France gained a 398-to-114 victory on his demand that a full debate on his policy of home rule for Tunisia be deferred until August 24. The premier had said earlier that he wished this vote to be regarded as a test of the assembly's approval for his North Africa policy.

The premier declared that his policy in North Africa, made public during his flying trip across the Mediterranean 10 days ago, was anchored on principles of internal autonomy, of military and diplomatic union between Tunisia and France, and of guarantees for French residents in the protectorate.
